

The City as Society (The City's Software)

Jasmina Metwaly and Philip Rizk, Cairo

The city can be seen as conjunction and aggregation of social interactions. This course questions common formal and informal systems of rules created to maintain the status quo of these interactions. The City as Society puts into question structures of power, politics and invisible relations and juxtaposes these to demonstration/ networks/ people. What forms can this antagonism take, how and where does it reveal itself? We will identify the limits of the city within the current regime of rule and explore utopic moments/ communities in revolt.

Keywords: the city, order, the street, prison, power, structural power, fear, anxiety, economics, law, politics, revolt, the crowd, coming together, protest, popular committee, the utopic, the village, leisure and work space, formal and informal structures